It Is Worth Keeping

Sir Edward Beatty stated that he briefly and plainly when he told a western reporter what used to be a "what surplus is now a wheat reserve" which may be the salvation of a famine-stricken Europe when Hitler and his gangsters have been cleaned out.

If reports coming out of the occupied countries have any basis in fact, Canada's 800,000 bushels are not a surplus over present and prospective world needs; nor would there be even a commercial surplus if international trade were possible. Europe, producing at normal peace-time rate, would be able to buy what we have to sell; and actually needs the wheat to feed its people during the coming year.

The wheat is for the time a "frozen" asset, unalienable because of war conditions, but an asset none the less, one which can be kept, and will be eagerly bought and consumed once the deadlock created by the agencies of broken peace and peace restored on the basis of free and uncontrolled commerce between nations.

The problem is to take care of this prospectively saleable supply until the trade routes and markets are again open. The strong probability is that the Government, the elevator companies and the farmers will all have to build stockpiles, and the outlook is that it will be good business to do so.

The Raid on Egypt

Marshal Graziani is said to have a force of 260,000 men, scattered across some hundreds of miles of desert from his bases in Libya to his advance command within the borders of Egypt. His objective is the conquest of that country and of the Suez canal; and the establishment there of a new base for operations against the British in Palestine.

He has been given an important contract. Should he succeed, Italy would dominate the whole eastern Mediterranean area, close Britain's short sea route to the far east, and be within striking distance of the oil fields in Iraq and Iran. Short of the conquest of British Egypt, he could accomplish nothing that would be of more immediate value to them.

It will not do to underestimate the forces placed at the disposal of the Marshal or the ability of the commander. Abyssinia provided little test of his generalship or the valor of his troops. And it is safe to assume there is a staff of German advisers at the Marshal's elbow in so vital an undertaking, a stiffening of German troops in his ranks, and that his equipment is the best available.

It cannot be supposed the British forces in the area are comparable in numbers. No doubt, they are. But the incidents in the last war, odds have been allowed the invaders. It is perhaps significant that the Egyptians have not thought it necessary to declare war and put their army in the field. The British command seems to have no doubt that it will be able to deal with the invaders.

If the stakes for which Graziani is playing are high, the risk is great. Defeat for him would mean disaster, complete and far-reaching in its consequences.

The raid on Egypt has to be recognized as a major enterprise, secondary only to the assault on Britain.

He Can't Understand It

"The Nazi bombers have made it impossible to longer credit them with aiming, even as a rule, their military attacks in their attacks upon London. They are engaged in a deliberate and systematic slaughter of civilians. By night they may drop their bombs indiscriminately, but even so they know the city is not properly defensible as a fortified area. By day they select their targets, and aim to the altitude to make their aim certain. The homes of the poor and the rich, public buildings which have no conceivable military use, churches, schools and hospitals—these have been the marks at which they have been hurling their missiles.

Since the beginning of the month the raiders have killed 2,000 civilians, of both sexes, and wounded 8,000 more, while inflicting only 250 casualties among soldiers. In three months they have killed 3,333 civilians and wounded 9,321. These figures speak for themselves. They are not to be explained away as accidents due to bombs missing what they were aimed at and hitting something else. These results are what were intended, and it is no doubt disappointing to Herr Hitler and his associates that the figures are not ten times as great.

The purpose of course, the only imaginable purpose, is to strike terror into the British people and induce them to demand a truce with the directors of the wholesale murder.

That the effect is precisely opposite the Nazi chiefs could not foresee. It is inconceivable to them that people should stand such punishment without crumpling. They couldn't stand it themselves, being of the gangster type, and they judge others by their own standards. If Berlin were being similarly treated, Herr Goebbels would be whining "Kamerad" into his microphone. Why London should be sending a different kind of message over the air Berlin can't understand; the Herr Dr. says so every evening.

German authorities at Brussels have forbidden Belgians to listen to any foreign broadcasts, other than those which come from Berlin. Any who disobey are declared liable to lose their radios and be set at hard labor. Herr Goebbels can't stand competition. The Belgians know why.

One of Herr Goebbels' assistants told a correspondent Germany had little more to fear from the R.A.F. bombers; so excellent a defense system had been built up they had not been over Berlin for weeks. That night the bombers went back and smashed the military headquarters of the Nazi capital, including the Templehof airport.

A veteran of the first Great War suggests that the troops in camp in Sarcee—and at other camps—be marshalled in a mass parade to do honor to Lieut. Robert Davies of the Royal Engineers, the Canadian-born hero who directed the removal of the bomb which threatened St. Paul's Cathedral. This and any other means of paying tribute to the heroism of Lieut. Davies and the members of his "suicide squad" would be entirely in order, and heartily approved by the public.

Britain's Wheat Reserve In Canada

By R. T. RICHARDSON

OTTAWA—Marketing wheat was always a serious problem through the years when Europe was preparing for war. It became more acute when the Germans overran Europe this year. Meanwhile, Canada alone wheat and sold denials that. Can anything be done to permit him to realize on his wheat within a few weeks? The answer is Yes.

In the first place, the British government has 170,000,000 bushels of wheat on its account in Canada. If it could be prevailed on to move this quantity into its own stores, the wheat problem would ease up seriously in Canada. The Canadian government might send someone over right away to see what can be done about this.

Discussions with the British government are being extended to cover 1941 and 1942. The United Kingdom has bought the entire Australian wheat crop until next year after the war is over. It is buying the entire Canadian wheat and cheese surplus, the entire New Zealand wheat. It might sign up for large amounts of Canadian wheat each year for the war.

Another suggestion, mentioned the other day by Dr. T. F. Donnelly, M.P., seems worth investigating without delay. It is to permit the wheat board act to permit purchases from others besides producers. Restriction on wheat board buying is one of the reasons for the original act of the Bennett government, which contemplated concurrent operation of ordinary wheat buying agencies. A storekeeper could take in wheat and sell it to the board, and the board would not only ease up the farmer's credit in the current cash deficit, but it would also bring into the picture considerable storage space now going begging.

The question of paying the farmer an advance has apparently narrowed down to the wheat board. It is the only body that can pay the banks that they were not a suitable agency for handling the problem on the scale presented by the general need of an advance to the farmers. This is not a problem of secured banking cash, but a problem of getting around a storage block that is preventing the farmer from collecting the guaranteed price.

A point made by Hon. J. G. Gardiner at a press conference the other day is well worth noting. The normal period for clearing up current farm accounts, he said, was about the first of September, from October 15 to Nov. 1. How much wheat will be left in store on the farms by that time? It will probably be less than 10 per cent.

The surplus is 770 million bushels. Commercial storage will take care of 400 million. The British account is 170 million. The requirements will take about 150 million in the coming year, and perhaps more since hog farmers can make a profit on wheat-fed bacon at the present time. Add up these figures, and you have some 20 million bushels left on the farms, plus next year's seed. The key factor in the present time is the need for cash to buy wheat overseas. If the United Kingdom takes its wheat loan, there may be an average of one load of wheat left on each of the 200,000 farms in the West.

The trouble with figures is that there are too many in the wheat picture at the moment, and the general sense of the situation is not being investigated the clearer will be the situation.

By FRED WILLIAMS

One hundred and thirty years ago today—Sept. 19, 1810, Joseph Robinson, the Englishman from Yorkshire, who was one of the founders of the fur trade, at least as it is related to national development, died at Montreal. Born April 15, 1740, he came to Canada in 1768; his brother, Benjamin, had come in 1760. His other brother, Thomas, came in 1772. In 1773 Joseph reached the Saskatchewan, established his own trading post on the Churchill river (which he called the English river) and returned to Montreal with a large cargo of furs. He was the first Englishman by Montreal merchants into the West. This suggested to Alexander Henry, the Prohibitor brother and other traders of the fur trade, a trading syndicate, which was the foundation of the North West Company. Joseph returned to Montreal in 1776, and in 1779 married Charlotte, daughter of Jean B. and the daughter of a trading syndicate, which was the foundation of the North West Company. Joseph returned to Montreal in 1776, and in 1779 married Charlotte, daughter of Jean B. and the daughter of a trading syndicate, which was the foundation of the North West Company.

But he did not embrace his activities in trading. On Nov. 21, 1784, a meeting was held in the Beaudry chapel at Montreal, which may well be considered the cradle of the constitutional liberties we enjoy today. A "Canadian Committee" was formed and a meeting held by about 500, including James McGill, the founder of McGill University, and Joseph Robinson acted as self-governance. The meeting begged the king "to grant us an end to the despotism and confusion which at present exists in the laws and the courts of the province, which put our properties in danger, and which render the commerce of the province which could exist, and will exist, among the population if it shall please you to grant us a constitution and a government, which shall be able and liberal principles and make this district of England a brilliant jewel in the imperial crown of England. And future generations will agree with the present that the king and his subjects, the people of the province of Quebec depends on union and submission to the crown and government of Great Britain."

It was not until 1792 that a legislature was granted. Joseph Robinson was one of its first members, sitting from the conference on Immigration and Land Settlement recommends that immigration be controlled, not stopped.

Current Comment

Rats Invading the West

Saskatoon has suddenly become rat conscious. It took a little time after the rats themselves arrived for the city officials to take cognizance of their presence, but now that there is an official assurance undoubtedly causing will be done. And something should be done.

Rats are dangerous animals. They are prolific. They have spread across the world in spite of ocean barriers. They do an immense amount of damage to property and they carry germs which destroy human beings.

When the West was first settled there were no rats. But they followed settlement. Their advance across the West was at the rate of about 20 miles a year. Two years ago there were few, if any, in Saskatoon, probably none other than an occasional one which arrived on a freight car. Last year they began to appear. This year they are noticeably plentiful, plentiful enough that one occasionally has to deal with them in the gutter. Next year there will be more and thereafter they will become a pest—unless action is taken—Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

Breaking the Ice

A pamphlet just issued by the Canadian Department of National Revenue shows just how human an individual is C. Fraser Elliott, commissioner of income tax.

Mr. Elliott is charged with the duty of making collections and he is trying to accomplish his task as painlessly—and as expeditiously—as possible. So he submits this proposal:

"The payments to be made on or before the 30th April next and each year thereafter will be so heavy that it may come as a surprise to those who have to pay it and have not provided for it."

"You are earnestly requested in your own interest to observe the weekly and monthly savings that must be made in order to have the monthly earnings in order to have the money on hand to pay the tax."

Another reason for giving this warning, of course, is that six months from now the cold, hard facts of the new taxes will be falling on the people. Foresight is the watchword if you prepare. In his cold, quiet, unobtrusive way, he is a matter of getting used to a very necessary idea—Vancouver Sun.

Was Ever a Battle Like This?

Goggle-eyed Americans, unable to credit their own senses as they watched the battle for Britain, must turn to a long-drawn Englishman for any explanation appropriate comment.

God of battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before?

Outnumbered, outgunned, their backs against the wall and with not a friend left in the wide world, they have struck down forever the old age and decrepitude, have set the clock back 200 years, and have suddenly become again the young and vibrant nation, the laughing, daring, fighting nation that they were in the time of their fathers.

This demands tribute, regardless of the issue at stake. It is a battle that has been fought for the world, instead of for their own land and their own lives, still the splendor of their fight will be remembered even from those who hope they will lose.

As a matter of fact, they have already won something. No matter what the issue of the battle, they have struck down forever the old illusion that the old England was dead, that the ancient glory had departed, that the mighty spirit of the old days had passed away. The new and the old, the men who followed Britain were not a whit better than the men who are dying in the trenches today. The old England was not dead, it was only sleeping. The men who served Nelson's gun had nothing on the men who guard the cliffs of Dover the men of the thin, red line at Waterloo, except they return to life, might count as an honor to stand at attention and salute their sons—G. W. Johnson in the Baltimore Sun.

Religion Day By Day

RELIGION GONE MAD

Words of the horrors surrounding the death of Jesus was the fact that it was the professional religionists who founded the religion of Rome was indifferent to His words and works; but the leaders of the Jewry, the priests and Pharisees, did the apostle, plotting and mischief-making. What a warning to all who are engaged in church work.

The first trial of Jesus was before an ecclesiastical court, the Sanhedrin, and he was found guilty of blasphemy. The proceedings were a travesty of justice and dignity. False-filled, the judges were the religious leaders of the day who presented them from the Sanhedrin to the Roman authorities. The victim before Pilate, that last trial for the Romans might not be frustrated.

Freckles

HEY, NUTTY, WHAT'S THE IDEA IN RUNNING ME FOR STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT? GOSH, I DON'T WANT THAT OFFICE!

WELCOME HOME, FRECK --- OH, I GUESS THE OFFICE WANTS YOU!

I'LL NEVER FORGIVE THE GUYS WHO STARTED THIS!

IT'S TOO LATE TO STOP IT NOW!

I DON'T WANT TO GET UP AND MAKE SPEECHES, AND ALL THAT STUFF! PHOOEY!

Answer: The Moon. A simple question now, but a tough one a few hundred years ago.

EXPLODES IN YARDS ROYAL DUKE

...the car had just stopped where the notice put up:
"unexploded bomb."
At last the bomb exploded a shower of the air which pattered the Duke's car and the vicinity.
The Duke stepped out of the car when the shower of audacious persons rushed several women shook the Duke.
The Duke, smiling, walked over
bomb and chatted with the Duke.
Engineers who had been sent to prevent the bomb went off.
